Precinct 14—Geo. Brown, Jos. I. Johnson, J. S. McLaughlin, John Pfeiffer and J. E. Barks.

At last the government officials in charge of the division of forestry of the department of agriculture have turned their attention to the needs of the South. In a bulletin sent out from that division appears the following brief paragraph which promises a beginning that should have been made long years ago:

A study of the southern longleaf pine has been begun by the division of forestry. A brief examination last fall proved many prevailing ideas regarding this tree to be mistaken. The rate of growth was shown to be comparatively rapid and resistance to fire far greater than is commonly believed. These discoveries suggested a fuller investigation for the benefit of lumbermen. The chief object will be to determine the length of time which must elapse after logging before another cut can be made. Such knowledge will enable owners to decide whether it will pay to protect logged-off lands from fire and keep up the taxes for the sake of subsequent crops.

THE bill to appropriate relief funds to the starving Porto Ricans is a transparent republican artifice to distract public attention from the dilemma in which that party finds itself in respect to the Porto Rico tariff inquiry. The bill purports to place at the disposal of the president the full amount of the customs revenue heretofore collected from Porto Rico commerce, for the relief of the needy inhabitants of the island. Besides being a broad admission—however unintentional—that the collection of such duties is unlawful and unjustifiable, it attempts to dispose of funds which do not belong to the United States or to the Porto Ricans, but to those who paid it into the treasury, as will doubtless be adjudged by the supreme court in its decision of the suits already brought for the refunding of the same to the parties from whom they were unlawfully collected.

"The Mother of Trusts."

At a luncheon given to his partners a short time ago, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, president of the Carnegie Steel company, in a moment of indiscretion superinduced by his environment, asserted that the profits of the company for 1899 were twenty-one million dollars, and the value of the business two hundred and fifty million dollars. One of his hearers, Mr. H. C. Frick, who had previously sold about one-half of his interest to Mr. Carnegie for its "book value," and valued the remainder of his holdings at five million dollars, for which Mr. Carnegie had offered him six million dollars, incited thereto by Mr. Carnegie's post-prandial statements, went home and began figuring, the result being that he discovered his interest to be worth something like sixteen millions and a quarter, according to the Carnegie estimate, whereupon he brought suit against his wicked partner for an accounting and the value of his interest as he had computed it.

The bringing of this curious suit, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Carnegie, in his answer, protested that he had only been joking, and that the real value of the business was only about seventy-six millions, is said to have given a severe shock to the republican leaders, who feared the effect upon the public mind of such untimely disclosures just at a time when they were struggling with a situation, with respect to their attitude upon the Porto Rico tariff bill, which threatened to destroy public confidence in the integrity of the chief doctrine of republicanism—the protective tariff.

The alarm was sounded, the chiefs and their henchmen rushed frantically to and fro, cautionary signals were hoisted; but it was too late, the damage had already been done, and the opponents of McKinleyism seized their advantage and struck blow after blow at the iniquities of of the Dingley tariff as illustrated by the Frick-Carnegie episode. They also reminded the public that Mr. Carnegie himself, having grown rich enough by tariff protection to be independent, had declared that his interests would be benefitted by a repeal of the tariff, or words to that effect.

It should be remembered that the Carnegie company is neither a corporation nor a trust. It is a plain, unadorned partnership. It gained its wealth, as many manufacturing corporations have done, by the operation of a tariff which enables it, as others do, to demand higher prices for its products at home than those it was perfectly willing to accept abroad, when it had a surplus for sale beyond the domestic demand. The same tariff, which "Sugar" Havemeyer declared is "the mother of trusts," has created trusts and enabled them to rob the people. It is not that "the trusts must go!" but that "the protective tariff"—which makes trusts possible—"must go!"

Does the democratic party want or need a stronger issue than this?

February Cotton Exports.

Henry Clews' circular of March 17 says:

The exports of merchandise during February amounted to $119,765,000; the largest February in the last five years. The imports of merchandise were quite large, $68,774,000, but the excess of exports amounted to $50,991,000; an increase of nearly 50 percent over the same month last year. Such a large and sudden addition to our trade balance is worth investigating. These are the principal articles of export for February:

	1900.	1899.
Breadstuffs	$17,293,000	$29,573,000
Cattle	2,620,000	1,274,000
Provisions	12,273,000	12,961,000
Mineral oils	5,597,000	8,463,000
Cotton	30,820,000	17,266,000

Cotton, it will be observed, accounts for nearly the whole gain, and the rise in price was an important factor. While the quantity exported during the month showed an increase of about 30 per cent, value showed an increase of 43 per cent; the export price rising from 6 cents in February, 1899, to over 8 cents in February, 1900. Incidentally it is worth emphasizing the value of this increase in the amount realized on the cotton crop to the South. If the southern planter secures $50,000,000 more for this crop than for its predecessor, it means much for southern merchants and the railroads, to say nothing of the industrial revival now going along at a stimulating pace in the South.

A $1,000 Calendar.

We are in receipt of the Armour Thousand Dollar Prize Art Calendar, consisting of thirteen sheets (size 10x14), reproductions of the prize winning designs in colored relief made by Messrs. W. P. McDonald and J. Dee Wareham. The winning of the prize by these young men has given them a national reputation among designers. Both names have for some years been well known to fellow artists in the west, in connection, particularly, with the Rockwood Pottery of Cincinnati. Mr. McDonald was born in that city, and Mr. Wareham, though a native of Michigan, has made it his home for seven years past. Both had their training in the Art Academy of Cincinnati, passing thence under the artistic influences that have prevailed at Rockwood and in late years visiting Europe. Their art is of local growth, a distinctly American development, but in close sympathy with the newer decorative movement abroad, which, however, it is in no sense imitates.

Send twenty-five cents, stamps or currency to Armour & Co., Chicago, and they will mail you postpaid, this elaborate calendar securely fastened in strong shipping package.

It is very hard to stand idly by and see our dear ones suffer while awaiting the arrival of the doctor. An Albany (N. Y.) dairyman called at a drug store there for a doctor to come and see his child, then very sick with croup. Not finding the doctor in, he left word for him to come at once on his return. He also bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which he hoped would give some relief until the doctor should arrive. In a few hours he returned, saying the doctor need not come, as the child was much better. The druggist, Mr. Otto Scholz, says the family has since recommended Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to their neighbors and friends until he has a constant demand for it from that part of the country. For sale by Hannah Bros., 21 South Palafox street.
